

NEW COURT HOUSE PLANNED

ABOUT THIS

— AND —

ABOUT THAT

By OLIVER GEDEIST

SMALL ONES, TOO.—Quite often we hear it said that the "big shots" of the business world "take advantage" of poor people and give them "the works" at every opportunity. Remember "malefactors of great wealth," of Theodore Roosevelt? Or, if you are not that old, "economic royalists" of a more recent period—by the late President New Dealer? But the big ones are pikers when compared to many of the "small shots."

"TOOK" A LITTLE BOY.—An illustration of the fact that there is no class distinction in crookdom, was presented recently. A little fellow, wanting a yo-yo (I hope that's the way to spell it), went into a school supply store and asked the price of a yo-yo. The keeper replied that he had some for 10 cents and others for 20 cents. "I have only 15 cents," the little fellow told the store man. The man sold the little boy a 10-cent yo-yo for 15 cents.

AFTERMATH.—If that had happened in a great utility store, immediately people would say that corporations are heartless and something should be done about them. And that's about all one could do about it. But the little boy, when he learned that he had been trimmed by the shrewd shop keeper, told his little friends, and they went and told the shop keeper they would not buy from him, and marched out of his store. Their few cents now are spent elsewhere.

THE POINT.—But the point of the thing: dishonesty is not confined to the big business man. It is everywhere, in all classes. It is unfair to blame all the financial wickedness in the country and world on "big business." Fact is that some of the sharpest practices in so-called big business originate with the less important routine workers who want to impress their superiors. Superiors adopt recommendations made by these trusted employees without, in some instances, knowing final implications, final results.

BECAME "BIG".—A man and his wife became "managers" of a combination apartment and light housekeeping room building some months ago when the owner decided to raise her child in the country. The new managers were just ordinary persons, without any business experience. In the building were and are a number of old people—pensioners. These new managers immediately felt their importance and showed it, taking away privileges which had existed for years. To make a showing, they eliminated some services, cut heat. It was only when some one with funds to protect the helpless stepped in and forced compliance with law that the couple relented in their meanness.

"GET EVEN".—They have threatened to "get even" with everybody in the building when OPA restrictions are eliminated. They are "mad" at everybody in the building. But they are not going to stay. But only because a friendly soul is willing to spend money to protect the weak.

ROOM.—There is room for improvement in the human family. But few want to improve. We live close to the law of the jungle. But, of course, we should rejoice that the thin veneer we possess does produce much good in the world. The same veneer should make us realize that rotten bums are not confined exclusively to the so-called "upper classes," whether financial or social.

RUGGED RIDER CROSSES COUNTRY
ON HORSEBACK TO MEET WIFENo Injuries In 4-Car Pile-Up

Near Orland Park, on route 6, three automobiles and one truck had a mix-up that cost Bernard J. Walters, 5455 Greenwood, an estimated $2,000, when his new Oldsmobile was roughly treated in the skidding mix-up.

The Ford stake body truck was driven by E. C. White, 167th street and 118th avenue, Orland Park, and a Mercury car reportedly owned by Judge Leonard C. Reed, Chicago, and driven by Elmer A. Anderson, 9842 Bensley, Chicago. Identification of another car reported as being involved was not made.

Jackknifing of a trailer attached to one of the cars was given as the cause of a pile-up of the cars. No one was reported hurt. No arrests were made.

COTTON BOLL WEEVIL
MONUMENT IN ALABAMA

The cotton boll weevil, which annually causes millions of dollars loss to cotton growers, is probably the only destructive insect to which a monument has been erected. Boll weevil losses suffered by southern farmers forced many of them to plant other crops beside cotton. Raising a diversity of products greatly increased the farmers' prosperity in numerous places. For this reason citizens of Enterprise, Ala., erected a monument to the boll weevil in 1919. It is inscribed, "In profound appreciation of the boll weevil and what it has done as the herald of prosperity."

The narrow streets, old-world architecture, and foreign names found in New Orleans tend to create an atmosphere both foreign and remote. Yet the present population, according to the World Book Encyclopedia, includes only about 4 per cent foreign-born.

FREEZIN' REASON

The last ditch method of stopping on ice is to jam on the brakes—because it's usually the last ditch you will ever skid into. In the first place, stay out of situations which may require a quick stop. When you do use the brake, apply it lightly and intermittently. You will stop quicker, and you will maintain better steering control while doing it.

From Tacoma, Wash., to Washington, D. C., would be considered by most persons as a rugged trip if the travel method was the back of a horse. But Ned Kennedy of Tacoma thinks otherwise. "It's just as easy as any other way," the rider said in New Lenox the other day during a brief stop for refreshments.

The horseman left Tacoma May 19, he said, and on his way he encountered snow drifts 10 to 20 feet deep. He is 61 years old.

Ned Kennedy has no axe to grind, he said. He simply thought horseback-riding to the national capital would be a good thing to do—and he got at it. He expects to visit the President, his state's United States senators, and meet his wife, who is vacationing in New York. When will he arrive in Washington? He did not know. He's merely letting the world go by as he leisurely jaunts along in the beautiful comfort furnished by the back of a horse.

The traveler sleeps in his own hotel every night, his "hotel" being a sleeping bag. And, he said, his hotel has a "no-tip" rule.

The couple have no children, the rider said.

A floor show has been announced as "very unusual" decorations to mark an important attraction for the affair. Members of Grace church and Guild members are walking ticket offices, it was indicated.

MRS. F. J. KOHLHAGEN UNDERGOES
OPERATION IN ST. LUKE'S, CHICAGOFrankfort Writer
In St. Luke's;
Duration Unknown

Mrs. F. J. Kohlhausen of Frankfort underwent a serious operation Monday afternoon at St. Luke's hospital, Chicago. A facial nerve involving neuralgia was the cause of the operation.

As a result of this, Mrs. Kohlhausen's column of Frankfort news items will be missed this week. Length of her stay in the hospital was not predicted.

either by Mrs. Kohlhausen or her private nurse.

Mrs. Kohlhausen has been suffering from the difficulty for some time, and last week she and Mr. Kohlhausen went to Chicago, where she underwent examination. There they were guests of their daughter, Mrs. Eloise Wright.

Following examinations, it was decided that an operation was necessary, and Mrs. Kohlhausen entered St. Luke's, where, through her nurse, she said she has "open house" within hospital regulations. She is in Room 4, and the hospital is located at 1439 S. Michigan avenue.

THANKSGIVING THOUGHTS

It's a long time back to the day when men and women on this continent first gave thanks for harvest garnering.

Just as it is a long time back to there, changes in the complexion of the country are equally vast—even greater, by comparison.

They were simple souls who first gave thanks on this continent—simple enough to believe that only by devoted effort could living be made. They recognized the value of work; they tolerated no sluggards. In that, too, there is a big difference between then and now.

Then, the simple life was necessary. It was healthful, too. Again, we observe a difference. Even with rugged living, inadequate heat, undeveloped medical science, those simple souls lived to good ages. They didn't know any better. They should have developed "hot spots" for shortening life, or, at least, for requiring medical attention to make it possible to keep on going to the hot spots. We have progressed far, of course. Modern machinery lightens labors, gives more time for physical and intellectual comfort, provides better (if not altogether, we are much better off now than were the first givers of thanks for bountiful harvests in the New World.

We should be thoughtfully grateful. In our abundance, we should be glad to share with the less well-placed, both at home and abroad. Not in a profligate manner, of course, but in well-regulated neighborly manner. Perhaps a rereading of the "Sermon on the Mount" would be helpful at the moment.

Yes, we are better off materially than were the Pilgrims, but, as a fun-loving, fun-seeking people, we have departed far from the spiritual courage of the simple souls who set the pattern for giving annual thanks for bountiful harvests.

Trip to Doctor
Ends in Hospital

Roy W. Erdman, New Lenox township, and his nine-year-old son Elroy were painfully injured late Monday afternoon while returning home from a visit to the family physician.

Ice on the road, route 45, five miles south of Frankfort, resulted in a skid which sent the car into a convenient tree, and sent Mr. Erdman to Silver Cross hospital, in Joliet, along with Elroy.

Following treatment, including several stitches in his face, Elroy returned home, but Mr. Erdman remained in the hospital. He sustained severe lacerations, with a bad gash on the upper lip.

It was said at the hospital that he will, probably, be home in two or three days.

The visit to the doctor which ended in the accident was to have Elroy's hand treated, the result of injury last week when he stuck his hand into a corn picker.

Proposed Structure
To Cost 2 Million;
Plans Not Matured

Architects Monday night, in Will county court house, disclosed details for a proposed new county building on the present grounds and adjacent to the present building.

Responding to invitations issued by Dr. Elmer J. Stephens, chairman, board of supervisors, a large group of citizens attended the meeting and participated in a question-and-answer clinic on the proposed building.

In the invitations issued, the chairman stated that the committee in charge of the building program had not seen or read specifications or recommendations to be presented by the visiting architects.

J. J. Burgee and B. H. Bradley of the architectural firm of Holabird and Root presented the tentative suggestions and plans for the new building, with an estimated cost of from $2,000,000 to $2,500,000 to be financed by a bond issue with a 20-year limitation as required by law.

Questions were raised about the cost to the taxpayer, and it was asserted that with the lower interest rates obtainable now, there would be little or no increase in taxes to pay for the cost of the building, since the hard roads bond issue is in its last year, and with the same amount of money being applied to the retirement of the new bonds, no new taxes of any consequence would be needed. This, however, was not definitely affirmed by the committee, although members of the committee seemed to be of the same thought.

The proposed new building, of a modern, businesslike style, "built for efficiency, yet retaining the dignity of a public building," as one of the architects stated it, will afford 45,000 more square feet of working space than the old building affords. Maintenance costs, it was stated, will be greatly reduced, and cost of heating will be much less, since the new building will have lower ceilings and less waste space.

A number of persons took part in the discussion, making suggestions and seeking information.

Plans submitted Monday night were more of an exploratory nature, the chairman stated, designed to establish a basis for more definite plans for the much-needed building.

Voters must approve the bond issue to get a new courthouse. When the electorate cannot be determined, it is not issue will be submitted to the voters, until all plans and specifications have been completed.

Trespassing Costs
Man 6-Month Term

Entering a church to wash himself and make use of the church facilities to cook food cost a wayfarer a six months' jail sentence last week.

Entering Green Garden church basement social room last week on an errand, a woman member of the church was startled to find a man partially undressed. Going for help, an officer was called, the man was taken to Joliet, and taken before the court by States Attorney James Burke, the man pleaded guilty to a vagrancy charge and was sentenced to six months in jail.

No charge was preferred by church authorities, nor was any member or official of the church called to testify. The man admitted that he had recently been released after serving a term for tampering with an automobile.

FIRST GRAIN SHIP SAILS FOR EUROPE . . . The S.S. Julian Poydras is pictured as it docked at the Port Richmond grain elevator to take on a cargo of 349,000 bushels of wheat—precious cargo for the hunger-ridden peoples of Europe. This is the first shipment of grain realized under President Truman's emergency food program. It is to send such vessels as this, heavily laden with grain, to Europe that the American people are observing meatless Tuesdays and conserving food in other ways.

G-MEN GET THEIR TRAINING . . . If you want to catch a criminal you must know more than he does. That axiom is the keynote of the world's most intensive law enforcement training course—that of a G-man—which takes place at Federal Bureau of Investigation headquarters in Washington and in the FBI academy at Quantico, Va. One of the major qualifications of a G-man is that he know how to shoot; so the new agent spends many hours on the range at Quantico. Left, special agents fire tracer bullets from machine guns during night practice; center, they fire the practical pistol course; right, an agent works out with a Thompson sub-machine gun.

HORSING AROUND IN SCHOOL . . . A child without a horse would feel out of place in England's most unusual educational institution, Wings school at Fairford. The faculty invites pupils to bring their ponies or horses to school in the belief that cooperation between child and animal develops self-confidence. This pony is developing something—maybe patience—as it listens to Diana Selous fiddle.

ROLL OUT THE BARRELS . . . When an oil gusher suddenly erupted in the back yard of Mr. and Mrs. William Tallman at Newport Beach, Calif., did it bring them fame and riches? No, just grief. A city ordinance prohibits oil drilling in Newport Beach, and it costs too much to cap the gusher. Neighbors began complaining about oil in their basements, so the Tallmans, at wits end, tried to dip it into barrels by hand.

FRANCE REMEMBERS . . . An old grandmother purchases flowers to place on grave of her dead son on All Saint's Day in France, set aside as a national day of mourning.

VITAMIN C . . . This is a standard type of picture from Florida, showing a Florida beauty surrounded by Florida oranges. Here, however, the beauty, Sissy MacCalla, is only four years old.

MET OPENS 63RD SEASON . . . In case you weren't able to get to the Metropolitan opera house in New York for opening of the opera season this fall, this is the way it would have looked if you had been sitting off to one side in the first balcony. The brilliant scene of New York's assembled elite included several kings' ransoms of jewels, assorted ermine, chinchilla and silver fox fur coats, and a few hundred boiled shirts. The performance was Verdi's "Un Ballo in Maschera."

CHURCH SERVES THE WORLD . . . These Filipinos are getting medical treatment at this clinic near Manila because of the generosity of church-going Americans. Contributions from churches in every state in the union made it possible for Church World service to send the drugs, instruments and other medical supplies used at the clinic.

CHIVALRY IS NOT DEAD . . . These chivalric looking gentlemen are some of the boys from Siena, medieval city of Italy, which nostalgically recalls the good old days twice every year by reverting to fifth century clothes, customs and habits. Big feature on these occasions is the "Palio of Siena," a medieval horse race through the city's square.

THE FICTION CORNER

'THE BARGAIN'

By MRS. W. E. ABBOTT

Emma Haines awakened with difficulty from her early morning sleep. That noise! What was it? It was like water swirling rapidly down a drain. Her brain cleared, and she heaved her great bulk out of bed. Only one thing sounded like that!

The outlaw pig belonging to Ed Slatterly was raiding her garden again. Probably wanted more of her prize watermelons. She'd show her! Hastily she thrust her feet into slippers, put a house dress over her nightgown, and started for the door.

There she was, the demon! She'd know that bony, stubborn figure anywhere.

"Get out of there, you ornery creature!" Emma picked up the nearest stone and threw it with all her strength at the skinny sow. The pig grunted and ran toward the hole under the garden fence, which she had prepared for herself. She squeezed her gaunt frame under the wire, grunting noisily. Emma threw another stone, and the sow trotted off down the road toward home.

Emma sputtered to Seth all during breakfast about the sow.

"She's against everything I've ever seen in nature," complained Emma. "Eats watermelons, of all things! Of all the truck I have in my garden, those melons are the things I prize most. And doesn't that cussed pig know that? She makes for the melons every time."

Seth didn't say much. After all, he was more than ordinarily fond of pigs, all pigs. He loved to raise them, see them grow large and contented from good feeding. Anyone had only to look at his fifty fat hogs to know Seth enjoyed caring for them.

Emma sighed. "I'd go over to see Slatterly today, if I didn't have so much to do. I'll try to go tomorrow. It's simply got to stop! Those trashy swamp folk will have to learn to keep their stock to home!"

It was three days before Emma found time to visit the Slatterlys. It was two miles back to their shack at the edge of the swamp, but Emma was a hearty fifty-year-old woman, and she loved the walk through the fields and wood lots. Several of the Slatterly children were playing around the cabin. They were handsome children, in spite of their dirty, unkempt appearance.

"Where's your Dad?" said Emma shortly to the oldest boy.

"Paw!" yelled the boy. Ed Slatterly appeared at the door of a shed behind the house. He was a small, wizened man. Emma had never seen him when he wasn't chewing tobacco. She walked toward him. Over his shoulder she looked inside the shed. There hung a butchered pig.

"Oh," she said. "That your pig, Ed?"

"Yes, Ma'am," he replied. "I was aimin' to give you a piece of that meat."

Emma softened. She walked inside and looked at the meat. It looked good. "Watermelons must make good hog feed," muttered Emma to herself.

"Ma'am?" said Ed Slatterly. "I said that would be nice," replied Emma. "We'd love having some fresh meat. It's very kind of you."

"That's too much," she said firmly.

"No, Ma'am," he said. "I have a lot of young 'uns, and they eat hearty, but the weather is warm."

"Get out of there, you ornery creature!" Emma picked up the nearest stone and threw it with all her strength at the skinny sow.

Meat won't keep too long. You take it right along home."

"That's mighty fine of you, Ed Slatterly," said Emma. Her conscience was beginning to hurt.

Emma carried the ham all the way home and put it in the refrigerator to cool. Meat was expensive, and the thought of a roast of fresh ham made her happy.

She was at peace with the world when she went to bed that night.

Early the next morning she woke up in confusion. That peculiar sound again. Water, going rapidly round and round in a drain. No! It couldn't be! She sat up. There wasn't another pig anywhere that sounded quite like that.

She bounded out of bed and hit the floor with a thud. Slippers, the house dress over her nightgown, the flying trip to the garden. She rubbed her eyes. It was Slatterly's sow! There couldn't be two such pigs in all the world.

Dazedly she picked up a stone to throw at the creature.

"Emma," Seth's voice was calling from the bedroom window.

"Leave her be. I'll be down."

A moment later he appeared in the yard, his overalls drawn hastily over his pajamas. He looked sheepish.

"It's all right, Emma," he said. "That's our pig now."

"Ours!" cried Emma. "Oh, no, not that!"

Seth ran his hands nervously through his hair. "You see, I just couldn't bear seeing that hog looking the way she did, all run down and thin and neglected. So I traded one of our pigs to Slatterly for her. That gave them meat, and I thought I could maybe fatten her up."

Emma stared at him open-mouthed.

"Although I gotta admit, she is an outlaw," said Seth. "May have to get rid of her after all."

"May have to!" cried Emma. "May have to, indeed! What about my watermelons? You certainly will have to!"

Seth grinned and wiggled his toes in the grass like a small boy.

"Whatever you say, Emma," he said meekly. "Whatever you say, my dear."

Seth hadn't been married thirty years for nothing. He knew the value of silence. He knew with certainty that this was not the time to mention that he had promised the Slatterlys a dozen of Emma's prize watermelons, as soon as they were ripe, to complete the deal.

Don't Forget to Compliment Them

One of the most effective salesmen I have ever known accomplishes his near miracles in business, not by any intellectual system, but by following one of the simplest of all plans I know for impressing others favorably.

He compliments his customers. They like it so much they buy from him. They also form an attachment to him which makes it next to impossible for a competitor to come in and make sales.

All great leaders from the beginning of the world have found that if they can compliment others properly and judiciously they are employing an aid which is beyond price it is so valuable.

When you compliment a person, it shows that you are interested in him and want to please him. In you that person sees a reflection of his own desires. And that's what makes us like others—a reflection of the things we like most in ourselves.

Of course I am not recommending flattery. When a compliment degenerates, it becomes mere flattery; it is not a boon but a handicap to friendship. You can't trust flattery. We feel we can trust compliments.

This salesman I am telling you about never makes the mistake of flattering his customers. "What I try to do with every man is find out what he wants to hear about himself," he explained. "I never compliment him upon things that are obvious—that others compliment him upon. About those things he gets tired of hearing. But all of us yearn to have somebody tell us about some other excellence of ours—one that isn't quite so obvious."

That is a shrewd observation on human nature. I remember reading how bored John D. Rockefeller was when complimented upon his business success. He wanted to hear something else. The thing he wanted to hear was praise about his household economies. And Andrew Carnegie wasn't nearly so proud of having given away so many millions of dollars as he was of his ability as a public speaker.

The point I am making is that if you want your compliments to do the most good you have to ferret out little things which the other person would like to hear somebody say about him.

The next thing my salesman friend does is to make his compliments ring true. He isn't fulsome about them ever. He is truthful. He can go into any company and be liked and popular because in any company he finds something nice to compliment everybody upon.

The reason he finds these things is that he looks for them. There isn't any reason why you shouldn't do just as much is there?

SCRIPTURE: I John 4-5; II John; Acts 4:1-13.
DEVOTIONAL READING: Romans 8:1-11.

Proof of a Christian

Lesson for November 30, 1947

OPEN your Bible to I John 4-5; Second John; and Acts 4:1-13, and you will have the Scripture background for Sunday's lesson. Add to the above passages Romans 8:1-11, as devotional reading, and you will be thinking of the unimpeachable proofs of a Christian.

Two men are brought before us as examples of Christian discipleship.

Peter and John had been preaching Christ to the people in Jerusalem, and they were arrested and brought before the Sanhedrin. The rulers and priests scolded them, asking by what power or name they had done this. Peter, filled with the Holy Ghost, answered them:

"Be it known unto you all, and to all the people of Israel, that by the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth, whom ye crucified, whom God raised from the dead, even by him doth this man stand here before you whole. . . . Neither is there salvation in any other; for there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved."

And then follows the verse that reveals the proof that these humble fishermen were really Christians:

"Now when they saw the boldness of Peter and John, and perceived that they were unlearned and ignorant men, they marvelled; and they took knowledge of them, that they had been with Jesus."

The Lord Is My Helper

IN HEBREWS 13:6, we find this revealing statement: "The Lord is my helper; I will not fear."

The more we study the words of John in Sunday's lesson—words that remind us again and again that God is love, that we love him because he first loved us, that when we love him we are made strong in serving him, the clearer we come to understand the incident in Acts 4:1-13, when Peter and John stood boldly before the Sanhedrin, impressing the court with the fact that they had been with Jesus.

They were not afraid because they were conscious of the presence and power of God. The Psalmist put it sublimely when he said, "The Lord is my Shepherd, I shall not want."

When We Walk With God

THE incontestable proof of a Christian is the manner of life he reveals when he walks with God. "And this is love, that we walk after his commandments. This is the commandment, that, as ye have heard from the beginning, ye should walk in it," II John 6. When we walk with God, in the light of his word, what a glory he sheds on our way!

A group of men sat in the University Club in Boston, discussing religion. Someone asked Professor William James to define Christianity.

"I will not attempt a definition of Christianity, but I can give you an illustration."

And he pointed to Phillips Brooks. There was no argument. Phillips Brooks was proof positive that Christianity is something vital and practical and real and effective in everyday life.

Who Is a Christian?

WE COME now to the question which always emerges when we think along this line, Who is a Christian? Look now at I John 4:15-21. I quote some of these revealing words:

"Whosoever shall confess that Jesus is the Son of God, God dwelleth in him, and he in God. And we have known and believed the love that God hath to us. God is love; and he that dwelleth in love, dwelleth in God, and God in him."

We are not certified as Christians by any man-made creed, nor by any ritual or ceremony. We are certified as Christians by the direct access which every soul may have with God, through Jesus Christ our Great High Priest forever.

Church membership does not make us Christians. Baptism does not make us Christians.

Anyone may become a Christian, provided he or she is willing to confess their utter lost estate and, repenting of sin, believe on the Lord Jesus Christ as Saviour and Redeemer. Christ is the Author and the Finisher of our salvation. There is none other name under heaven given among men whereby we must be saved.

"Whosoever will may come."

Rock Bass or Goggle Eye
The body of the rock bass, red eye or goggle eye is oblong and rather robust; profile scarcely angled at nape; color is olive green conspicuously tinged with brassy and dark mottling in some waters. Some of these fish are almost black. The average length is from 8 to 10 inches. The dorsal fin is much longer than the anal. There are 11 spines in the dorsal fin. The eye is almost always deep red colored.

Tanks Chase Mosquitoes
New piece of mobile heavy artillery to be used against mosquitoes, flies, ragweed, poison ivy and other pests has been invented in Tennessee. It is a spraying apparatus consisting of a pair of tanks mounted on opposite sides of the hood of a tractor, with a pump on the rear axle powered through a rear take-off pulley.

Development of Roses
Men have devoted almost entire lifetimes to the discovery and development of both orchids and roses. The secret of growing long-stemmed roses was discovered when it was found that pinching terminal buds made the main stem produce a new shoot and continue to grow longer, at the same time producing a more beautiful flower.

Famous Epitaph
One of the most famous epitaphs in the English language is Benjamin Franklin's own epitaph in his own handwriting. It was written for Samuel Morris in Philadelphia and presented to him by Poor Richard on August 31, 1776.

Atoms for Metals
Scientists of an electrical manufacturing company are using radioactive carbon atoms to pry open metallurgical secrets that may lead to ways to increase the lifespan and strength of metals.

Citric Acid of Fruits
Citric acid, which gives lemons and oranges their sourness, also is present in cranberries, currants, strawberries, raspberries and many other fruits.

Grease for Wheels
American farmers produce 20 million pounds of beef tallow each year, used to lubricate the axles of the driving wheels on railroad locomotives.

Ancient Spectacles
First mention of the lens in recorded history is that of Meisner in the 13th century. He stated that old people derived advantages in better seeing from spectacles.

SKYSTREAKS TO RECORD

The Navy captured the world's speed record in August, 1947, and, five days later, broke it with the jet-propelled "Skystreak," shown above.
Pilot by Comdr. Turner E. Caldwell, Jr., USN, the plane flew 640.7
miles per hour in the first test at Muroc Field, Calif. Within a week
Maj. Marion Carl, USMC, set a new mark of 650.6 miles per hour in the same plane. (Official U. S. Navy Photograph)

LEFT-TURN LOOSE SAYS, "I DON'T KNOW WHY I DID IT. I TURNED WITH-OUT MAKING THE PROPER HAND SIG-NAL OR WAITING FOR TRAFFIC TO CLEAR
AND YOU SEE WHAT HAPPENED. THAT FEL-LOW BEHIND ME DIDN'T KNOW I WAS TURN-ING, AND SWERVING TO MISS ME HE ALMOST WRECKED THE MAN BEHIND HIM! AND THEN,
CUTTING INTO ONCOMING TRAFFIC THE WAY
I DID, I ALMOST HIT THE CHAP COMING TOWARDS
ME. HE SLAMMED ON HIS BRAKES AND THE GRILL-
WORK OF THE CAR BEHIND HIM IS JUST A MEMO-RY! AND THAT PEDESTRIAN? I DON'T KNOW
HOW I MISSED HIM! YES SIR, A SIMPLE LEFT TURN—BUT I'VE SURE LEARNED MY LESSON!"

MAN LOOKING FOR TROUBLE

With the central office testman on the job, trouble on your telephone line doesn't get a chance to last very long.

At his special switchboard, called a test desk, the testman keeps an eye on every customer's line. Using precision devices, he can spot a flaw or weakness on your line and often can have it corrected before you're aware of it. This checking and repairing is what telephone men call "preventive maintenance."

Looking for trouble before it happens has paid off. In 1926 a telephone was reported "in trouble" once every five months, on the average. Now the average is only once every two years.

With experts and instruments like these, Illinois Bell is keeping your telephone service dependable and trying always to make it more valuable to you.

Ma Hoskins
Sneezed at Cats!

Ma Hoskins couldn't understand why she got a fit of sneezing every time Harpo, the cat, came in the room. Finally figured she'd have to get rid of Harpo altogether.

Then Doc Hollister explained she had an "allergy." Cat's fur made her sneeze like strawberries give some folks rash. He gave her an inoculation so she and Harpo could live sneezelessly together.

I guess a lot of us have "allergies" in the social sense. Some folks just can't stand movies, or radio comedians. Other folks don't go for beer. Myself, I enjoy a moderate glass of beer or two with friends... but it's up to them what beverage they choose.

From where I sit, the important thing is not to let our social allergies result in antisocial taboos. Let's not criticize the fellow who likes beer if we like cider. A little inoculation of tolerance can help us live-and-let-live happily together.

Expert to Judge Cattle Classes

Final preparations are being made for the opening of the nation's largest live stock show in Chicago November 29.

Show officials promise that the 1947 International Live Stock Exposition and Horse Show, which will continue through December 6 in the International Amphitheatre at the Chicago Stock Yards, will be one of the greatest in its 47-year history. Final returns on entries indicate that a number of departments will be larger and more impressive than ever.

Long known as the final court of judging for live stock, this year's exposition is attracting from the furthestmost regions of the continent the finest farm animals that breeders and stockmen can produce. They will represent a vast area enveloping 32 states and six Canadian provinces.

Sixty-three well-known stockmen, packers, and agricultural college specialists from 18 states have the task of choosing winners among the expected 12,000 animals which will show here. Heading the judges' panel is Richard S. deQuincey, of Hereford, England, an internationally recognized breeder and stockman, who will judge all the individual steer classes.

Mr. DeQuincey's final task will be that of selecting the grand champion steer out of the several thousand which will be exhibited. The international grand champion steer is the most celebrated bovine winner of the year, and the contest arouses more interest than any other show competition.

Show officials announce that in 14 of the 30 breeds that are featured this year entry figures have surpassed those of the 1946 "Victory" International, the previous record year.

Most significant gain over any previous show is in the cattle classes, where increases in all four breeds total several hundred more than last year. These classes are in addition to the usual large exhibitions of prime cattle in carlot units and of junior steers shown by 4-H and F. F. A. members.

Increase in six of the 41 breeds of sheep are also reported, and most significant in the swine classes are the phenomenal increases in Tamworth and Yorkshire breeds. Tamworth classes register a 400 per cent increase over last year and Yorkshires are 500 per cent over.

He's Looking into Your Future

The scientist in the agricultural laboratory is as truly a pioneer as our grandfathers who fought their way westward to the rich farmlands and the broad ranges of the west. He's looking into your future . . . seeing greater things! His findings, put to use by practical livestock men and farmers, are resulting in thriftier, faster-gaining cattle and lambs, grazing the Great Plains . . . higher yielding crops enriching the Corn Belt . . . new immunity from disease for your livestock. He is pioneering a better and more abundant life for you through new markets for your output, improved products for you to sell.

Miracles like hybrid corn seldom happen by chance. Into its development went more than 30 years of patient research. It cost federal and state governments about ten million dollars. Experiments on individual farms cost unknown amounts. But last year alone hybrid corn added more than $750,000,000 to farm income. Thanks to research, we now have such chemicals as DDT. Chemists searching for an insecticide to protect our armed forces from malarial mosquitoes found this potent bug killer. Already, DDT has made livestock producers many extra millions through increased production of meat and milk from fly-free herds. One ranch reports an extra ton of beef for every pound of DDT used. What a return on a half-dollar investment!

There are similar thrilling stories being written in every phase of agriculture. Many of the new developments come from colleges and experiment stations (largely financed by taxes paid by individuals and business) or from laboratories supported by private industry. From them you get improved varieties of crops, better control of pests, parasites and diseases, and many another aid to production. The man who keeps abreast of scientific progress and applies it on his farm or ranch usually profits most. Your county agent, vocational agricultural teachers and farm and ranch publications are your helpers to keep you abreast of latest research information.

Swift & Company, for many years, has engaged in extensive research on agricultural products. It enables us to develop new products; to improve existing ones; to produce better nourishment for your family, your livestock and your crops.

Soda Bill Sez: . . . little grains of sense can produce a big harvest of dollars. . . take a good look at America—and be thankful!

Soft Corn Fattens Livestock

by I. B. Johnson
South Dakota State College

I. B. Johnson

Soft, moldy corn has been fed successfully and profitably in each of three years to fattening cattle, hogs and sheep at the South Dakota Agricultural Experiment Station. This corn gave the greatest returns when fed during the winter as compared with spring and summer feeding. The gains per bushel were reduced after the beginning of warmer weather in April. The soft ear corn had the following approximate values when compared with No. 3 ear corn in the rations fed during the winter months: 82% when fed to yearling steers; 78% when fed to yearling lambs; 76% when fed to hogs and feeder calves.

The soft, moldy corn was palatable to cattle and sheep. When soft and hard corn were offered in separate bunks to other cattle on feed in 1943, the soft corn was always the first to be consumed. The lambs fed soft ear corn usually cleaned their feed bunks more rapidly than those getting hard ear corn.

The soft corn was fed without any special preparation such as drying, salting, shelling, crushing or grinding. It was stored in uncovered piles on the ground and fed field run. When broken ear soft corn was fed to cattle and sheep, wastage was reduced. Shelled soft corn and ground soft ear corn were eaten readily, but were difficult to store as they heated and further molds developed.

Studies made on soft corn piled on the ground in eastern South Dakota indicate that it can be so stored only during the winter months. If the amount of soft corn is greater than that which can be fed before the beginning of warm weather, it should be stored in narrow cribs to allow it to dry out rapidly with the coming of spring. Another desirable practice is to make it into silage by running the soft ear corn through the ensilage cutter.

NUTRITION IS OUR BUSINESS—AND YOURS
Right eating adds life to your years—and years to your life

From the Editor's Notebook

Since the days of the Pilgrim fathers, Thanksgiving has been a heart-warming day for American families. This year we, more than any other nation, have cause to be thankful for an abundant harvest. In helping to feed America, we are thankful that we can add our efforts to those of the hard working farm and ranch families who produce our food.

If you plan to visit the International Livestock Show in Chicago, November 29 to December 6, plan also to visit us at Swift & Company. Competent guides will gladly show you along the Visitor's Route through our plant. All of us in the Agricultural Research Department cordially invite you to drop in for a chat. We'll be looking for you!

Producers who attend the International Livestock Show, particularly those who come in from distant points, will quickly realize why the livestock-meat industry needs nationwide meat packers, like Swift & Company. Two-thirds of the nation's livestock is produced west of the Mississippi River, but two-thirds of the meat is eaten east of the Mississippi. This means that, on the average, there is a gap of more than 1,000 miles between major producing areas and major consuming centers. There has to be somebody to bring the producer and the consumer together. Helping to bridge that gap between the western range and the kitchen range efficiently and economically is one of the chief services performed by Swift.

F.M. Simpson.

Service BULLETIN

Filled with the Christmas spirit, we've been looking into the beginnings of some of our Christmas carols. We kept finding scraps of information new to us. Matter of fact, the origin of the term "carol" itself was a surprise to us — up until our research, we thought the term applied only to Yuletide songs. We found that the old carols were sung and danced in many different ways, both indoors and out. We came across an old, old folkstory of Christmas 1012 A.D. which tells of some young people's cavortings in a churchyard and the consequences therefrom. We learned that things like customs and geography affected the source of carols and that the strange combination of rats and a blizzard gave us our most popular carol. We found out that a certain English king was "versed in songmaking." We read about one hymnwriter who put the "Man Who Came to Dinner" to shame. We felt pretty set up when we discovered how many Christmas hymns are of American origin. We call our story CHRISTMAS CAROL NARRATIVES which is illustrated by Mister McKee (who, incidentally, kept hounding us until we had to find the origin of "Jingle Bells".)

A VOICE FROM THE COUNTRY

Complex Economy Threatens Small Business Enterprise

By LOUIS BROMFIELD

Released by WNU Features.

There are times when it seems that the pattern of our agricultural and business life appears not to have kept pace with the development of industry and technology.

The old frontier of the general farm is one case in point. Another is the field of distribution of all goods, but notably of food, and the small enterprise, either retail or industrial. Like the old-fashioned general farm, the small business enterprise has in the past been a great bulwark of American independence and character, and frequently of our economy as well.

The question is whether our present complicated and complex industrialized economy any longer can afford these remnants of another day, and whether the proprietors of the general farm and the small business enterprise can survive much longer the economic strain placed upon them. Tied in with the problems of both is the question of distribution, notoriously expensive and inefficient, and in the actual process of painfully adjusting itself.

It is not only that the world has shrunk immensely in our time but also that the United States has shrunk with it. The problem of adjusting wages and purchasing power to the prices of all commodities has become the most urgent one now confronting the free enterprise system. Size, specialization and efficiency all have their bearing upon living costs, and notably upon food prices.

The old-fashioned general farm is an inefficient unit in our highly complex interrelated production economy. So, too, is the small retail enterprise competing with the efficiency, buying and distributing power of the vast, well-integrated chain stores, super-markets and cooperatives.

The economic pressures of our century are all toward bigness, efficiency and low-cost production and distribution, exactly as the rewards of the automobile industry have gone to mass-production, assembly-line big companies which produced a commodity of high quality for a low price. In the problem of food costs this efficiency begins at the farm, extends through the old field of distribution to the retail outlet.

Cycle of High Costs. The high cost of food begins on the farm through inefficiency and low production per acre, which produces high costs per man hour and per commodity unit. It continues through the field of distribution which involves handling — many times — commission merchants, market rigging, and at times a spread of price between producer and consumer of several hundred per cent.

The point is that small retailers as well as the great chain stores or cooperatives are a link in this chain, but that the small retailer is largely at the mercy of market rigging, commission merchants, expensive small-lot distribution and multiple distribution agencies (that is, the great wholesale buyers and commission merchants, the local wholesale distributors, et cetera—each of whom takes a cut eventually paid for by the consumer or in losses by the small retail proprietor).

At the same time, the small retailer is a victim of the economic squeeze created by the ability of the chain stores, super-markets and cooperatives to set low prices because of smaller purchase and distribution cost. Rarely, save in deluxe areas like New York's Madison Avenue, can the small unit retailer set a price higher in his community than that of the bigger organizations, although his costs may be much greater.

The economic tendency and pressures today are certainly all in the direction of low costs, high efficiency and the bigness which creates them. The consumer is concerned almost wholly with the goal of buying the best quality for the lowest price. Certainly super-markets, chain stores and cooperatives are growing and will continue to do so, taxed or tax-free in the case of big cooperatives, for even with taxes they still can sell at lower prices than the small independent operator.

Dollar Value Paramount. All of this, of course, raises the grave question of monopolies, if not nation-wide, at least in certain states and areas. Monopoly, in turn, implies government regulation. But at the moment, at least, the consumer is not concerned with these things. He is concerned solely with making his dollar buy as much as possible, both in quality and quantity.

Bromfield

"In a sense, the small distributor, as exemplified by the corner grocery store, and the old-fashioned general farmer, are, like the horse and buggy, relics of a former day."

The fundamental point is that the pressures against the small enterprises are economic and, therefore, extremely powerful. In a sense, the small distributor, as exemplified by the corner grocery store, and the old-fashioned general farmer are, like the horse and buggy, relics of a former day. This was before the world and this nation had shrunk, when the retailer bought his food directly from the farmer, and food commodities were not shipped from rural communities into the cities and then back again to the town in those same rural communities with an enormous distribution markup in between. This markup the big food handlers are able largely to eliminate by direct mass buying and shipping. The forces of economics and of mass production and distribution are difficult or impossible to resist.

Of course, it would be possible for government to subsidize the small, inefficient, handicapped operator with taxpayers' money, very largely that is what has happened in the case of the unprogressive, inefficient farmer and the absentee-landlord-tenant systems in agriculture. But the consumer takes the beating because he continues to pay not only high prices but also taxes in the form of subsidies out of the other pocket.

It is notable that the National Poultrymen's association recently urged congress to drop all poultry and egg price-support measures so that the subsidized, inefficient poultry producer would be eliminated and the prices would find a lower level to the consumer, but one still profitable to the efficient producer.

Sentimentally, I hate to see the passing of the old-fashioned general farm and the corner grocery store. Both institutions gave me much happiness and friendliness in my youth, but I am afraid there isn't any longer much place for them in our highly complex, economic civilization in a shrunken world. In the end, we shall be forced to catch up with our times by the sheer ruthless force of economics and because the consumer no longer can afford either institution.

Ex-G.I. Finds Old Army Shirt in Surplus Store

HASTINGS, NEB.—When Charles E. Jenkins, a war veteran, was buying work clothes in an army-navy store here, a familiar looking khaki shirt caught his eye.

It was the shirt he wore through the Solomon islands campaign. He had turned it in when he was graduated from officers candidate school in 1944.

Jenkins' initials and serial number in the shirt were in his own handwriting. When Jenkins submitted his dogtag as final proof, George Engelbrecht, store manager, gave him the shirt.

Free Licenses Give Indians 'Pretty' Cars

TALLAHASSEE, FLA.—Florida's dwindling band of Seminole Indians once again will be able to "dress up" their cars and make them look pretty as a result of a long-standing agreement on automobile license plates.

The Redmen have at least one advantage over the "palefaces" in that they don't have to pay for their license plates. The policy was started about 17 years ago by Gov. David Sholtz, who wanted to help the Seminoles with their problems. Sholtz took his entire cabinet of state officials down the Tamiami trail to hold a powwow with the Indians, explaining that Florida wanted to assist the Indians in any way possible. But the Indians turned down his offers, insisting that they didn't want any help from the palefaces except free licenses to "dress up" their cars and make them look pretty.

Firestone CHAMPION GROUND GRIPS CHOICE of CHAMPIONS IN ALL THREE 1947 NATIONAL PLOWING MATCHES

CHAMPION Plowmen know that the performance of their tractor tires can "make" or "break" them in a plowing match. They must have tires that take hold and pull — on soft ground — on hard ground — on sod — on stubble. They must have tires that take a full, clean bite, a center bite — tires that plow right through under all conditions.

That's why winners in the three big national matches this fall (Big Rock, Wheatland, Illinois and Webster City, Iowa), plowed on Firestone Tires. They, like most other contestants in these big events, could not afford to gamble with a "broken center" tire that might let them down by clogging up with trash, slipping and spinning.

Firestone Champion Ground Grips will perform for you on every job just like they perform for champion plowmen. They will always take you through. And they will take you through faster, without slipping. That means time and money saved.

Specify Firestone Champions when you order a new tractor or when you buy replacements for your present tractor. See your nearest Firestone Dealer or Store today.

Household Hints

Teaching the family to wipe their feet before entering the house saves wear and tear on rugs.

Measure curtains before laundering them so you will know the size to which they should be stretched.

Naphtha or gasoline left over after cleaning garments may be strained through a filter cloth and returned to the can for further cleaning purposes.

Have shelves in the kitchen placed low enough to be within easy reach. Then useless things will not be placed there and allowed to remain.

If your pocketbook winces at the mere thought of Christmas—don't start scratching names off your list—but decide here and now to give practical, useful gifts. For example, local dealers are featuring two timely items you can give generously to the smokers on your Christmas list. We refer to Camel Cigarettes and Prince Albert Smoking Tobacco. These popular brands are all dressed up in festive wrappings, ready to give. Camel comes in a handsome ten-package carton—contains 200 mild, flavorful Camel cigarettes. And for the pipe smoker, tongue-friendly Prince Albert is available in Christmas one-pound tins. Both Camels and Prince Albert have space for a personal "Merry Christmas" message. Ask your dealer to put some cartons of Camels and tins of Prince Albert away for you now.—Adv.
